

PARTNERSHIP WITH DJAMBUL INDIGENOUS BUSINESS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: January 2020

Partnership to Launch New Indigenous Consultancy

Kitney proudly announces its Partnership with Star Consultancy to establish Djambul.

Cairns, QLD: Kitney today announced a new partnership with the Cairns-based Star Consultancy in a joint project to establish a new indigenous WHS and business consultancy, Djambul. With its name derived from the language of the Yidinji Buma people and meaning 'two', Djambul is symbolic of the coming together of these two parties to develop close relationships and work together with clients.

“We are proud to be joining together with Jamen Wilcox, who is a long-standing colleague” says Jo Kitney, Director and Principal Consultant at Kitney. “Jamen’s depth of experience and knowledge of indigenous and WHS needs across industries and with Indigenous Communities across Australia and far north Queensland is outstanding.”

“We have recently opened our office in Cairns and we will service our clients and provide them with practical, customised support, mentoring and solutions” says Jamen Wilcox, Principal Consultant at Star Consultancy. “Djambul’s service and offerings are important to the people and organisations we work with.”

Djambul will empower clients to build their business capability. Djambul will provide both consultancy, management, mentoring and training services which will assist businesses to meet legislative requirements and help them develop the skills necessary to effectively develop and manage their management systems.

Additionally, with Jamen Wilcox’s personal connection to Indigenous communities, Djambul will place special focus upon supporting those communities who live in remote areas and will aim to assist its clients build sustainable and effective relationships with Indigenous groups and communities.
